Thoughts on Samuel Saltoon?

I found him on Transhub and noticed he did bulk billing with a healthcare (medicare) card. I also noticed he did informed consent hormone initiation, and had good availability for future appointments. Anyone dealt with him before? How is he?

TSPC is mentioned in the "Our Other Clinics" section of East Sydney Doctors, and that would concern me with regards to implants.

TSPC has a bit of a reputation and that's worth looking into. I'd try to work out if East Sydney Doctors operates on the same policies that cause that reputation.

I had been going to TSPC for years, and looking back on my bloods, I'm very disappointed by how my levels changed when I started going there. I'm now at the point where I'm questioning if certain other issues I've been struggling with were caused by, or at least exacerbated by low E levels. I would have happily recommended TSPC until about a month ago.

I'd not go to Taylor Square or any doctor or who practices there.

I know him from med school, very friendly and supportive, if we didn't have a pre-existing relationship he'd be my GP. He can insert hormonal implants quite capably, did my first one last week and he was so sweet about how happy all his first timers are to get them <3 Vanessa Farr at the same practice is my GP, she's great with trans people and Saltoon will insert implants for her patients.

What dosage implants does he do?

I mean, 50 and 100 are the standards, often 2 are needed if you're going for T suppression levels of E monotherapy but standard approach is to start with one and test levels in 6 weeks before adding another.

Based on my experience I'd definitely recommend him. I've been seeing him for a few months and I haven't had any issues at all. He's very kind, very supportive, and I get the sense he genuinely cares about providing responsible and holistic medical care.

does he do bulk billing with medicare? How straightforward is that as a process?

I like him. He had a knife in me today and it all went well (E implant). Generally chill and available.

He sounds like a cartoon pirate. That's gotta be a good sign. For real though, no idea. I hope he works out for you though.
